In 1969 America was taking part in an unpopular war in Vietnam. The Moon landings were a way to distract the public from what was going on.

An employee called Bill Kaysing who worked for the company that made the engines for the Saturn V rocket that supposedly took people to the Moon claimed the rockets did not work properly.